"She added simply," I don't know what they do, I do not ask. Work is scarce in Verona. But whatever it is, I know they do it well." "Yes," I agreed. "They couldn't do it better."

I waited outside until the boys rejoined me. Then drove them back to the city. They sat beside me, not speaking. For my part, I did not say a word-I knew they would prefer to feel that they had safely kept their secret. Yet their devotion had touched me deeply. War had not broken their spirit. Their selfless action brought a new nobility to human life, gave promise of a greater hope for human society.

Plants take food as animals and human beings do. While in case of animals and human beings there is only one mouth through which food finds entry into the body, plants have too many such openings. Rather there are two kinds of mouths in plants. The roots are first kind. They suck water from the surrounding soil and pump it up into the body of the plant as sap. It passes through the trunk and branches and reaches every tissue in leaves, buds, flowers and fruit. The other kind of mouth in the plants is in the form of tiny pores occurring in large numbers on the surface of leaves. These pores are known as stomata. Through them the plants suck carbon dioxide. Then in the presence of sunlight, the plants manufacture food in the leaf cells. 5
